

Thank you for joining The Next Interview. This agreement outlines how your participation and recorded content may be used. It's designed to ensure clarity, professionalism, and mutual respect.

1. Permission to Record and Use

By participating in The Next Interview, you grant permission to record your appearance (audio and/or video). You authorize Doland White and DWC, LLC to edit the recording for clarity or length and to distribute it publicly through podcast platforms, YouTube, websites, social media, newsletters, and other channels that promote or support the show, including companion materials such as transcripts, summaries, worksheets, or clips.

2. Ownership and Usage Rights

DWC, LLC retains full ownership of the recorded interview and all derivative materials (including edits, clips, transcripts, and summaries).

You retain ownership of your original ideas, frameworks, and intellectual property and grant DWC, LLC a non-exclusive, royalty-free license to use that material solely in connection with this interview and its promotion.

3. Distribution and Promotion

Your episode may appear in edited video or audio clips used for promotional or educational purposes related to The Next Interview

If a future project involves using your material in a commercial product outside of the podcast, we'll contact you for separate consent.

4. Compensation

Your participation is voluntary and unpaid. There is no guarantee that your interview will be published, and you acknowledge that no editorial approval or compensation (now or in the future) is owed. You are welcome to share and promote the episode or related media for your own professional use.

5. Representation and Integrity

All editing and promotional use will preserve the intent and integrity of your message. The Next Interview exists to elevate insight, not to misrepresent or distort it.

6. Release of Liability

You release and hold harmless Doland White, DWC, LLC, and their affiliates from any claims arising from the recording, editing, publication, or distribution of your interview and related materials.
